THE EMPHASIS OF SEXUALITY ON CAMPUS

Does anyone remember the old cliche, "Beauty is in the eye of the beholder"? Well, so does sexuality. Who says every girl on campus must look like Raquel Welch? That poor girl with the 38-22-38 figure is really unhealthy. She must have quite a time sitting up with all that extra weight! (I wonder if she's ever tried it!) Also, can you girls imagine how annoying it must be to keep buying larger sweaters? And just think how exhausted she must be from running away from all those guys who want her to go WHERE? with them! I'm sure I'd feel quite sorry for myself if I were so deformed. But girls are not the only ones with problems.

Who says that every guy on campus must resemble Richard Burton? Being a girl, I can't really give a detailed account of a guy's opinion, but I am able to speculate. "Who cares if Harry has a 13 inch chest and a bald head?" (He's got nice teeth). Just because Egbert fainted after hitting his pregnant cat last night doesn't mean he's weak. (Just suffering from morning sickness) And what about dear Penrod the one who caught his braces on his girls teeth last week. (They got lock-jaw) But still, even this is not the entire story.

Who decides when a lady is not a lady or when a gentleman is? (Offer her a Tiparillo and if she accepts, she is; or offer him the key to your Playboy collection and if he refuses, he is.) Just because Suzie clobbered Mortimer with a wrench last Tuesday doesn't make her unladylike. (She was merely trying to turn him on!!) And just because a certain person around happens to have a cute little swish when he walks doesn't mean he's effeminate. (It just means his hipbones are loose!) But however you want to look at it sex is all in the way you look at it.

So people, please realize that sexuality is as sexuality does and if you do, then you probably are!

PART TIME PASTIMES

by Cyndy Vosburgh

Once again here is your "24 Hour Break Girl" attempting to report to you about beloved institution. My acute perception and hearing abilities have enabled me to sense some new points about our educational home of some repute since my last article "Part-Time Pass-Times."

The fact that it is an institution can be the reason or excuse, I suppose, for it's deficiencies. I am forced to give top priority, because of the personal nature of the disaster of discovering that the whole Ladies Room in the Administration Building was out of order, the telephone in the library was inoperable, the air conditioning was running in 30 degree weather, the candy machines as usual were all empty except for gum and assorted mint lifesavers, and one of the four main doors to the library was not functioning properly. Also, the second floor of the library with all it's beautiful splendor and decor was lined with a trail of pails, buckets, and assorted dishes to catch the rain seeping through the ceiling.

I am still pondering over the fact that the flies are still maintaining residence in the library; I thought they went South? or something! I was also wondering about the trees that are in the Quad; they don't seem to be losing their leaves. I mean it looks bad for an institution of higher learning to have slow trees.

I "heard" the heating system in the library, when it's running is still not working up to par. When the heat comes on, the noise itself can warm you. The whole building shakes for a matter of a few seconds.

The most asked question on campus these days is . . . WHAT TIME IS IT? The validity of the question can be shown by the example of the library, whose various assortment of clocks all sport different hours. However, take note freshmen, the secret lies in the minute hand; disregard the hour hand and you will have the correct minute of some hour! But this can be confusing to someone on a successive three hour break, who loses all track of time and is not aware of the hour. Therefore, I suggest a synchronizing of all the clocks in all the buildings, or instead of class rings in the senior year the Frosh purchase BTCC insignia watches with an inscription of a few words of wisdom by President Cecil Tyrell.

This month's campus notables include Adam Ant, Tiny Tim, Carol Burnett, Milton the Monster, The Soup-for-Lunch Bunch, a pole, and a slinky.

A closing note to the freshmen girls – if you are still depressed about the fact that you sat home on Fall Weekend, don't let it get you down chances are you will be sitting home Winter and Spring Weekends, too.

STUDENT POWER

by Anne Klingenholz

Power is a word of such depth and meaning that it would be virtually impossible to define it in a single concise article. Student power, however differs in connotation from the more general term above, though even this is at the mercy of each student's subjective self. It is dependent upon the moods, feelings, attitudes and desires of a particular moment.

Student power can serve as a source of identity for many or as a source of refuge for few. It is something in which one is able to take pride as activity which is reserved for him. It can constitute any of the following:

1) The right to communicate with professors on a man-to-man basis. In college, it is important to believe in the right of the individual to "speak out" to professors, as well as to
